

The Moon Sign

In A Relationship

The moon sign is one of the most important placements in astrology for YOU, but what effect does this sign have on your PARTNER?

In a relationship, your moon sign dictates how you respond to your partner during an emotional moment.

So, what does that look like? Let's imagine you have a massive, blowout fight. Your first big fight always shows a new side of a person.

Up until this point, you've mostly seen each others' ascendants, sun signs, and venus/mars placements, but during the first fight, your partner will see your moon sign, and you'll see theirs.

When you hit a wall and feel completely overwhelmed, it's often your moon sign that comes out.

Keep in mind that this isn't 100% of the time (there can be other placements that contribute when you feel this way). After all, everything in astrology depends on your entire chart, but I've found it to be accurate about 90% of the time.

Your moon sign will also come out when you're feeling insecure, especially in the relationship.

For example, when feeling worried about the relationship or jealous, an Aries would lash out in anger, while a Libra will pacify his/her partner or even just avoid the situation and hope it will get better.

Here are the ways that each moon sign will react during fights or times of insecurity:

Aries:

If you're an Aries moon, your tendency is towards anger. You burn up quickly and will either explode or implode, but you can't calm yourself down without somehow getting this anger out. Usually, your partner takes the brunt of this anger (or coldness, if you're implosive). Once you get this anger out, you feel better, but your partner definitely doesn't. This may be one of the hardest parts of you for your partner to deal with.

You need to get your thoughts out during a time of crisis, but the goal is to learn how to avoid exploding towards your partner. Instead, find a new means of releasing your pent up frustration. Often, this anger is actually just sadness.

Taurus:

If you're a Taurus moon, you're pretty stable emotionally, but you can clam up during times of stress. You're the type to avoid discussing your emotions or stonewall your partner if things get really bad. While your partner probably enjoys not having to deal with an emotional rollercoaster, it can be hard to get the truth out of you.

The place to start is by digging into your emotions on your own. Do some typical “therapy” work. After all, you can’t explain your emotions to someone else if you don’t know them. Recognize that you do need to talk about your emotions (to some extent) with your partner in order to have a truly intimate relationship.

Gemini:

If you’re a Gemini moon, you tend to manipulate words. During fights or times of insecurity, you may try to outwit your partner. You’re very good at convincing your partner that they are wrong and you are right; it’s easy because you’re so mentally sharp. While your partner will feel slightly off about this approach during a fight, they usually won’t be able to argue much of what you’re saying because you’re so cunning.

The problem is that this approach does not usually result in a true resolution. You choose to stay on the mental plane when your emotions feel scary and fight with words, but these scary emotions are exactly what you’ll need to learn to talk about with your partner. Shift the focus from winning to true connection and you’ll experience much more profound relationships.

Cancer:

If you’re a Cancer moon, you get hurt very easily. During a fight, you may start to get offended by virtually everything your partner says, and it can be hard for you not to take things personally. Your partner may find it difficult to express themselves without hurting you.

Cancer moon is a tough placement in a relationship because it's so hard to overcome these hypersensitive tendencies, but it can be done with a lot of emotional self-work. You need to dig into your emotions and understand why it is that each thing triggers you and makes you feel hurt, then explain this to your partner instead of quickly reacting.

Leo:

If you're a Leo moon, you tend to get swept away in your own feelings. Your emotions are strong and fixed, and you might find it hard to step outside your bubble and see how your partner is feeling. You don't mean to be self-absorbed, but it can be difficult for you to imagine that there actually is another side to the story. You may refuse to let something go because it's so important to you, but you don't realize how you're hurting your partner in the process.

You'll want to learn temperance, moderation, and how to compromise. Everyone always has a valid side with real emotions, even if you can't see your partner's in the moment. Learning to ask your partner questions about where they're coming from (and the why behind their feelings and actions) will help you react in a more constructive manner.

Virgo:

If you're a Virgo moon, you have a tendency to become hypercritical during a stressful moment. You may start to judge your opponent (or, in this case, your partner) and pick apart their flaws. While this is a very effective battle strategy, it can be really painful for your partner in the moment. You definitely know how to hit where it hurts.

You'll come to realize that you only attack because you feel attacked. The goal is to learn how to control your reaction, and to tell your partner when you feel hurt or uncomfortable instead of attacking them with your judgments. Learn how to soften and be vulnerable.

Libra:

If you're a Libra moon, you simply don't like fighting. You want to escape the fight by whatever means possible, so you often end up apologizing or admitting wrongdoing just to make it stop. You might also lie or stretch the truth, or you may tell your partner that you agree with them when you don't.

At first, your partner will be happy by your acquiescence and will feel that you both worked out the fight in a healthy way. However, over time, most partners of Libra moon people come to feel betrayed by their partners' falsehoods. They also bear the brunt of any passive-aggressiveness you enact after the fight, usually because you don't feel like you got a chance to speak your piece. Overcoming this fear of speaking up for yourself is extremely important, but you'll want to learn how to do so in a kind, caring manner.

Scorpio:

If you're a Scorpio moon, you get easily fixated on one emotion or thought. You will refuse to budge until you feel done, especially if you're hurt emotionally, but it can wear your partner down. You get stuck in your own head,, but if your partner has a different perspective, they may not feel heard.

It can be extremely hard to see that there are other perspectives because you feel so deeply, but it's necessary to put yourself in your partner's shoes. Work on being fluid, flexible, and expressive, and dig deep into how your partner feels by asking them questions about their values and emotions.

Sagittarius:

If you're a Sagittarius moon, you can be avoidant during a time of stress. It's not that you're straight up ignoring the problem, but you just want to find something more interesting or upbeat to put your energy into. For your partner, this can be difficult, especially if the topic is something that's important to them.

The typical Sagittarius moon can be selfish, though most of them don't mean to be. You will want to recognize the times when you dismiss your partner's concerns because they don't align with how you see things. Learning to put yourself in someone else's shoes, even if it makes you nervous to access those emotions, is essential to grow truly close with your partner.

Capricorn:

If you're a Capricorn moon, you may tend to acquiesce to your partner because you don't want to dig deep and find out what your real emotions are. You keep your feelings buried because when they're uncovered, you feel them so strongly, so it feels safer to avoid emotions altogether.

During a fight, your partner may feel like they are not getting your authentic truth. You're pretty easy to resolve a fight with and tend to make everyone else happy during a moment of stress, but your partner will still sense that you're leaving something out. You will want to work on expressing your authentic emotions, even if it feels painful, in order to have an intimate relationship.

Aquarius:

If you're an Aquarius moon, you can be really stubborn. Once you decide on something, it's hard to change your mind, because you believe that what you think is simply a fact. Your thoughts always feel logical to you; you aren't emotional, but you have trouble understanding your partners' emotions. Your partner may feel that you are cold and withdrawn.

If your partner reacts with anger or sadness, they are usually telling you that they seek connection. Try to put aside your logic for a moment and simply be with your partner in an emotional space. If you're an Aquarius moon, emotional connection will solve most of your fights and help during stressful times!

Pisces:

If you're a Pisces moon, you have extremely expansive feelings that are constantly changing. You're sad, then mad, then loving, then sad again. You may feel like you're swept away on an endless sea of emotions with no coastline in sight. This placement is difficult for you, but is also tricky for your partner, because it can be really hard to follow along.

You'll need to learn how to channel your emotions and compartmentalize them. As a Pisces moon, logic is always your friend! Learn how to stick to the facts and trust that each emotion will pass. Try to avoid playing the victim, because that makes it almost impossible for your partner to react in a constructive manner.

Interested in learning more about relationship astrology? Wondering what qualities, likes, dislikes, and relationship styles you and your partner have?

Check out our eBook all about relationship astrology here!